Short Bio

Daniela Molinari is a Legal Advisor at IntLaw Consortium and an advanced law student at the University of Buenos Aires, with academic interests in corporate and international law.

At the Consortium, Daniela assists in the development of strategic legal projects with States, international organizations, academic institutions and law firms. Her work ranges from advanced legal research and stakeholder engagement to supporting advisory efforts on States' international regulatory matters, particularly in international arbitration and the governance of emerging technologies such as artificial intelligence. Furthermore, Daniela supports international human rights litigation efforts through substantive legal research and case analysis.

Through her work at the Consortium, Daniela has also engaged with the broader academic community, including her participation in the centennial symposium hosted by Lund University's Faculty of Law in Sweden, focused on the Law of the Sea. She has further contributed to research endeavors for forthcoming book chapters on international legal issues, including work to be published in the Hague Yearbook of International Law. She is also involved in the Consortium's Greatest Hits & Hidden Gems of International Law research project.
